

Taking Part in Research

My name is Georgia Freeman and I am currently a student on the MA Interpreting course at London Metropolitan University.

I am currently writing my dissertation (TR7P81) on the following topic: How does Vicarious Trauma impact Community and Public Service interpreters in the UK, and what support measures are there to mitigate its effects?

Vicarious Trauma refers to the emotional and psychological toll experienced by individuals who work with traumatised individuals or who are exposed to traumatic content through their work.

Research shows that as a result of Vicarious Trauma, interpreters may face burnout, compassion fatigue, and emotional distress.

As a Registered Public Service Interpreter (RPSI) if you feel that you have interpreted assignments that could have potentially affected you with Vicarious Trauma, you are invited to participate in this research. All you need to do is fill the following questionnaire: <https://forms.office.com/e/FqU42QFEgY>

If you could fill in the questionnaire by 23:59pm on the 12th of August 2023 it would be very much appreciated.

The information you provide is strictly confidential and will only be mentioned anonymously in my research.

If you have any questions, feel free to get in touch with me at gef0137@my.londonmet.ac.uk

If you have any concerns about the research, please contact Dr. Danielle D'Hayer, Associate Teaching Professor and Course Director for the Master's in Conference Interpreting at London Metropolitan University at d.dhayer@londonmet.ac.uk
